1. The recipient has to be an existing terminal operator with good record of service and a contract valid for a sufficient period to ensure recovery of the advance.

2. The level of activity on the terminal on which the terminal operator is working has to justify additional equipment and it is ensured that the equipment will be used in CONCOR terminal only.

3. CONCOR normally advances 80% of the cost of the equipment at market rates of interest which are much higher than the interest on bank deposits, short-term bonds etc. on which the surplus funds of CONCOR are parked as per the extent guidelines.

4. The advance with interest is recovered from the monthly handling bills of the terminal operator.

5. The equipment procured from the advance is hypothecated on CONCOR till full recoveries have been made.

(c) Some Writ Petitions of alleged violation of this act have been filed in the High Court of Delhi. These have, however, no relevance to the issue of CONCOR granting advance to contractors.

(d) Does not arise.
